

Developmental Therapy includes the disciplines of Speech and Language Services, Occupational Therapy and Physical Therapy.

Speech and Language Pathologists evaluate and treat children and adults in the areas of delayed communication, articulation, social skills, dysphasia (feeding/swallowing) and alternative communication.

Occupational Therapists focus on helping individuals across their lifespan to develop and improve skills that enhance daily activities in areas such as self-care, work, play and leisure. Occupational Therapists also focus on arm/hand functioning and sensory processing.

Physical Therapists focus on helping individuals across their lifespan to improve mobility and motion, relieve pain and promote the highest level of independence.
